CALLED TO CHRIST CHURCH

Rev. Arthur S. Johns of Rockville Invited to Be Its Rector.

He is the Son of the Late Bishop

Attainments.

Rev. Arthur S. Johns, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, Rockville, has received a very flattering call to the rectorship of Christ Church, East Washington, having been the unanimous choice of the vestry from a large number of names that were under consideration. Mr. Johns is considering the matter and will reach a final decision today. The probabilities are believed to be strong that he will accept the call. and, if he does, it is believed he will take charge of Christ Church here in June. As is well known, Christ Church has been without a pastor for some time, owing to the continued sickness of the Rev. Gilbert F. Williams, who suffered a nervous collong vacation, but, not finding himself benefited, decided to resign, since which time Archdeacon Childs has been in charge of the church. Mr. Johns, who, as stated above, will in all probability become the new rector of Christ Church, enjoys a high reputation as a scholarly and earnest churchman, and a preacher of much power and eloquence. He is the son of the late Rt. Rev. I. Johns, D. D., Bishop of Virginia, and is a graduate of the University of Virginia, where he finished his classical education, in the years 1869, 1870 and 1871. He studied theology at the Virginia Sem. He studied theology at the Virginia Seminary, was ordained deacon in June, 1873, and priest in June, 1874, by his father. His first charge was Christ Church, Northamp-ton county, Virginia. He then succeeded the Rev. Dr. Dawe, now of Baltimore, as the rector of Meade and Johns parishes, in Loudoun county, Virginia, from which place, after a rectorship of nine years, he removed in 1887 to Rockville, taking charge of Prince George's parish. He recently declined a very urgent call to St. Michael's Church in Trenton, N. J. Mr. Johns is the present secretary of the discrete of Wach. present secretary of the diocese of Washpresent secretary of the diocese of Wash-ington, having been chosen to that position at the first diocesan convention, and con-tinued therein since that time. He is a tall, well-built, athletic man of handsome and striking appearance, with an amiable and charming disposition, and a fund of humor well nigh inexhaustible. He has been very popular wherever his duties have led him, and there is deep and general regret in Rockville and the surrounding country, not only among the members of his congregation, but among the many of other denominations who know him, at the probability that he would accent the cell to the denominations who know him, at the pron-ability that he would accept the call to the Washington church. Mr. Johns is married and has an interesting family, his wife be-ing most earnest and helpful on all lines of church and parish work. They have a son, Lane Johns, a young man in his twen-ties; an interesting daughter, Miss Rosalie, and a little how five or six years old. and a little boy five or six years old.

ABOUT A WILL.

Bartholomew Long Goes Into Court Over an Estate.

Bartholomew Long, formerly of Leavenworth, Kan., as the brother and sole next of kin of the late Jeremiah Long today filed a bill in equity against Wm. F. Carne of Alexandria, Va., the executor of his brother's will, the Right Rev. John J. Keane, the Catholic University of America, the Litle Sisters of the Poor and the owner or owners of Mount Olivet cemetery, to declare void certain bequests in the will. The complainant states that his brother died in an Alexandria hospital or infirmary. a bachelor, January 12, 1895, leaving a purported will dated December 22, 1894, which was admitted to probate here Feb-ruary 12, 1895. The instrument contained, among other things, the following bequests among other things, the following bequests, $700 to the owner or owners of Mount Olivet cemetery; $1,000 to Bishop Keane, president of the Catholic University, District of Columbia, and $500 to the Little Sisters of the Poor. The complainant claims that the bequests are void under section 457 of the Revised Statutes relating to the District of Columbia. He admits giving March 23, 1896, a receipt to Mr 'arne for $10,827.16, including United States carne for $10.821.16, including United States bonds valued at $7,752.50, a bequest to him of $500, and the $1,000 paid to Bishop Keane under a power of attorney from him. He also admits directing Mr. Carne at the same time to pay the bequests to Mount Olivet cemetery and to the Little Sisters of the Poor, as well as one of $300 to Mary Sullivan of Providence, R. I. He claims, however, that being unable to read or write he did not fully understand the meaning and effect of the receipt, and denies having authorized the payment of any of the equests, not caring to question the one to Mary Sullivan, his aunt. He also alleges that his brother lacked testamentary ca-pacity, reserving the right to contest the will on that ground. Therefore, he prays that the executor be decreed to pay to him all moneys and prop-erty in his hands; that he recover back the equest to the Catholic University, with inrest; that the three bequests in question be declared void; that there be an accountirg, and that the executor be enjoined from paying out any of the estate except under the court's orders. Mr. Long is represented by Attorney Wm. Henry Dennis.

The Life Work of Rivers.

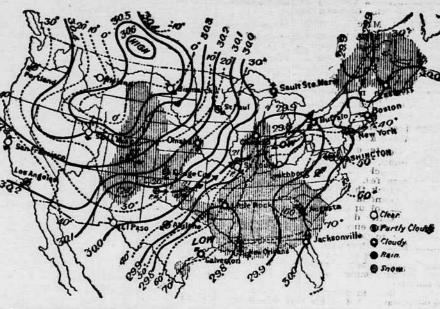

"The Life Work of Rivers" was the subject of an illustrated lecture delivered at the National Museum Saturday afternoon by Mr. M. R. Campbell. A large audience was present and the talk was interesting in fact and recital. Mr. Campbell said that rivers were much like man; first, youth, then maturity and old age. As rivers were constantly cutting down to the base level a waterfall resulted whenever a hard, conglomerate substance, such as quartzite, was found. Then the cutting process was slower, but it took place just the same until finally the fall was obliterated. Mr. Campbell argued that Great Falls were at one time in the vicinity of Georgetown, and that the cutting down process of ages had resulted in their receding to their present location. This process was still going on, however, and in the ages to come the falls would be entirely cut away. A number of handsome pictures were shown, the most of them dealing with canons and gorges which had been made by the cutting process. When a river finally reached the base level it reached its old age and became a sluggish stream. Mr. Campbell has done a great deal of work with the geological survey in the Appala-chian mountains and most of the views were of scenes in that locality.

GEN. FULLERTON'S DEATH. Searching in Vain for His Body

Where the Wreck Occurred. The body of General Joseph S. Fullerton which was carried down with the wreck of morning, had not been recovered up to a late hour last night. What was left of the sleeper Ulkraine, of which he was an occupant, was drawn from the river, and it was supposed the body would be found under it, but such was not the case.

The railroad company offered a reward of $50 for the recovery of the body, and in addition to the reward employed a number of men to dredge the river as far down as Confluence. The relatives of General Fullerton offered a reward of $100 for the recovery of the body.

General Fullerton owes his death to some one's mistake. He and Mr. J. S. Simpson of McPherson, chairman of the republican state committee of Kansas, were each given a ticket to berth No. 6 in the middle sleeper of the three sleeping coaches attached to the train. The middle sleeper was the rear sleeper at the time, as a third Pull-man was attached later. General Fullerton was somewhat put out as the result of the jumble, and Mr. Simpson offered to surrender the berth when the conductor came along and told the general that he would give him the best berth on the train in the front sleeper. The offer was at once embraced. General Fullerton remarking embraced. General Fullerton remarking that he did not care to ride in a rear sleeper anyway. He graduated from the Oxford (Ohlo) Law School, and when quite young began the practice of law. Several years later he went to St. Louis, where he continued to practice law. He entered the army soon after the civil war began as captain on Gen. Gordon Grarger's staff, and served throughout the war. He rose rapidly until he attained the war. He rose rapidly until he attained the rank of brevet brigadier general on Gen. O. O. Howard's staff. After the war he married Miss Mary Morgan, a daughter of George D. Morgan of New York, and resumed the practice of law in St. Louis. Later he was appointed postmaster at St. Louis. By fortunate business investments General Fullerton acquired considerable wealth. Use of the Appropriation. Judge Bowler, controller of the treasury, has written a letter to the Commissioners the passenger train near Oakland Saturday of the District, in regard to the use of the appropriation for the Connecticut avenue extension, in which he says: "I am in receipt of your letter of the 19th nstant, calling my attention to the provision in the District of Columbia appropriation act, approved March 3, 1897, relating to the extension of Connecticut avenue. That provision is as follows: "For the straight extension of Connecti cut avenue: The Commissioners of the District of Coumbia are authorized and directed to extend and open Connecticut avenue, on the straight extension of the line thereof are thereof as now established in the city of Washington, from Connecticut avenue extended, as now laid out and opened on the west side of Rock creek, to Kalorama avenue on the east side of Rock creek, thense by a curved line or offset to join with the present alopted and recorded location of Connecticut avenue, south of Kalorama avenue, and to include in Connecticut avenue a circular reservation at or near Kalorama. ue a circular reservation at or ne orama avenue in line with the straight extersion of Connecticut avenue, with suitable passageway around such circle; and also to include in such avenue such portions of the corners of squares at the intersection of Connecticut avenue with Kalurama avenue. Kalorama avenue as the Commissioners may find necessary for ample and convenient connections of streets; and they are authorized and directed to abandon the de flected line for Connecticut avenue heretoadopted, north of Kalorama avenue and to conform the plan of highway ex-tension to the extension of Connecticut avenue as aforesaid: Provided, That, con ditioned upon the dedication by the owners of the property lying within the lines of said proposed extension between the waterside drive on the east side of Rock creek and the present extension of Connecticut avenue on the west side of Rock creek, the sum of fifty thousand dollars is hereby appropriated, wholly from the revenues of the District of Columbia, to be immediately available, for the purchase or condemnation by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia of the property lying within the extension of Connecticut avenue and extending from said Waterside drive southerly to Florida avenue.

"As to all lots or parts of lots and improvements not purchased or contracted to be purchased within thirty days from the passage of this act, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are instructed to commence suit for condemnation."

You ask whether the availability of this appropriation "depends upon the acquire-ment of all the property within the lines of Connecticut averue, extended, between Florida avenue and Connecticut avenue west of Reck creek. In other words, could can) the appropriation be used in case the ommissioners shall fail to acquire all of the avenue between the points named for the sum of $50,000."

I am clearly of the opinion that the appropriation may be used to purchase such ecrtion of the property lying within the res of said proposed extension of Connecticut avenue as they may be able to purchase, and that the availability of the appropriation does not depend upon the ability of the Commissioners to acquire the entire property lying within those

The provision directing the Commissioners to commence suit for the condemna-tion of all lots or parts of lots not ac-quired by purchase clearly indicates an intention upon the part of Congress that the appropriation shall be used, although the entire property has not been acquired.

The case seems to me to come more nearly within the decision of this office in regard to the paving of Florida avenue (1 Comp. Dec., 523), than that relating to the improvement of Albemarle street (1 Comp. Dec., 105)."

McKINLEY'S SIGNATURE

Its Interesting Evolution in the Past Few Years.

He Dropped the "Jr." When Serving His Second Term as Governor-Now He Writes "William" in Full.

Men who have been intimately associated with President McKinley for years are much interested in the evolution of his signature. When he was serving his first term as governor of Ohlo he signed his name "Wm. McKinley, jr." His father was then living. The father died after the son had been governor of the state for a little over a year. He was then anxious to drop "jr." from his name, but as he had taken the oath of office as "Wm. McKinley, jr.," he decided to continue putting that as the official signature to all documents When governor of Ohio the second term he dropped the word "jr.," signing his name 'Wm. McKinley."

An Amusing Incident.

A funny incident at this time was that in transacting some business with the War Department the officials there refused to nonor a requisition from "Wm. McKinley. After a great deal of correspondence, which included certificates from the secretary of state and president of the state senate that "Wm. McKinley" was the legal governor of the state, the department honored the requisition.

requisition.

During the latter part of his term as governor McKinley signed the word "Wm." so often that the letter "m" became almost a straight line. This caused confusion, many people mistaking the name for a letter "W" with a straight stroke running out from the top of the letter. from the top of the letter.

His Present Rule.

Before taking the oath of office as President Major McKinley decided that thereafter he would sign his name "William McKinley," and that is the way he has affixed his signature to all documents turned out from the White House since the 4th of March. "William McKinley" will be found on all documents with which he has to deal during his term as President.
